It's really hard and time consuming to read Kant. I'll try again later.

Traces of existence, from Husserl's study of phenomenology, to Heidegger's existence and time, to Sartre's existentialism, exploring existence is a major problem in philosophy.

The classic I think, therefore, whether my philosophy has been subverted or not? Human beings are always desperately looking for the proof of existence and existence feeling, both in time and space, the expression and record of time in static painting by slikprint of the last century is a proof of existence. Apollo's landing on the moon Footprint is a proof of existence, except for the moment when these human stars shine, my question would be what is our daily proof of existence.

This artistic installation uses infrared sensors and motor linkage to sense the presence of people as they approach, record their position information, the motor drives gears, and the gear belt animated pen follows the movement track and speed of the person, leaving a painting on the white canvas behind. The proposal of this artwork is to explore how to transform the intangible into the tangible, find a bit of colorful existence in the modern life that is full of illusion.
