Inspired by Balagamwala's personal journey to avoid getting married, Arranged! is a board game that allows players to experience the struggles faced by young South-Asian women when it comes to getting an arranged marriage.

Arranged! masks the seriousness of the topic by turning it into a light-hearted game dedicated towards running away from the Rishta Aunty (the matchmaker.) Players are edutained through satirical scenarios based around skin whitening, secret boyfriends, and burdening dowries.

The game includes cards such as "you have child-bearing hips," "you were seen in public with your male friends," or "your grandmother convinced you to get a skin-whitening injection"
